FIRST... THE TRUTH

THE same man is a hero to his friend and a rascal to his enemy. Opinions differ. Opinions will always differ. But an intelligent opinion is possible only when all the facts are known. The truth—the facts—the news—these are the essentials. You must have them to think clearly, to decide intelligently on any question. And you need not be without them. News of every event of importance, every issue, every angle, is brought to you by the press—not just one version, but the whole truth as it can be drawn from every available source.

A GOOD newspaper's own expressions of opinion are confined to its editorial space. The integrity of its news columns is inviolate. They present the discoverable facts, uncolored by politics or allegiance to any group or faction. Your inalienable right to form your own opinion is unprejudiced.

A FREE and untrammelled press—a liberty that is denied in many other countries—that is what the independent daily and weekly newspapers of Alberta offer you. They give a voice to current opinion that is heard in high places. They are a perpetual safeguard to the freedom and welfare of the people.

YOU OWE IT TO YOURSELF TO SUPPORT THE NEWSPAPERS THAT SPEAK IN YOUR INTERESTS.

Developing Hudson's Bay Route

Recent announcements of efforts that are being made to interest British capital and Federal provincial governments to aid in extending the sphere of influence and service of Churchill as the Canadian port of the Hudson's Bay route by construction of rail extensions to give direct connection between the Bay and the larger centres in the western provinces as well as the Pacific Coast are stimulating public interest in the possibilities of further development of this comparatively new trade channel.

The past few months has seen the birth of proposals that Winnipeg should be given direct connection with Churchill by construction of a road due north from that city which would cut off approximately one-third of the distance between the Bay and Winnipeg via The Pas. That line should be built from Big River, Saskatchewan through the Lake Athabasca country, giving Prince Albert direct connection with Hudson's Bay and bringing Saskatoon closer; that a link should be made between that line and the Alberta Great Waterways Railway giving Edmonton and Calgary connection with Churchill and also, via Edmonton, a line from Churchill to Vancouver, using the existing C.N.R. main line from the Alberta capital to the B.C. coast port and the latter, a suggestion of a more direct line between the Pacific Coast and Churchill through the Peace River country.

It is not likely that all these lines will be built at once, but so many advantages can be claimed for them that it is reasonable to believe extension will be made from time to time, as the need for them becomes more apparent, and that in course of time, perhaps not so far distant, a more or less direct northern route from Churchill to the Pacific Coast will be an actuality. Just how long that will be a matter of pure conjecture at this stage.

Some of the advantages claimed for these extensions are that they would make possible the development of the rich mineral lands in the north of the three prairie provinces with greater rapidity, that the shortened distances between Hudson's Bay and the larger western centres would result in decreased freight losses on many incoming and outgoing commodities and that a shorter overland route would tend to promote more tourist traffic between Europe and the Orient. It is also contended that the construction of a direct north route between the Pacific and the Bay would have distinct military value in the event of Canada becoming embroiled with any aggressive Oriental power, since Vancouver would no longer be the sole practical outlet for the western seaboard.

While the military aspect has not been overlooked, the promoters of this new northern route of communications are more particularly interested in the value it would have in developing the trade and commerce of the country. Its potential effect on the free exchange of commodities between Western Canada and European countries and particularly Great Britain and its possibility in promoting more local trade.

With the prospective development of the mineralized areas of this vast north country becoming more immediate the last-mentioned objective is one which has immediate significance to the people of the western provinces and should be of particular interest to the farmers who, under existing conditions, are finding an urgent need of developing more and greater local markets for increasing varieties of farm produce.

When the immensity of this great northland is reviewed and the undoubted great value of its resources is considered, the possibility of developing local markets for prairie farm products almost stretches the imagination. Because of the nature of the country almost everything required for sustenance of its workers will have to be shipped in and the natural and economical source of supply for such commodities is the contiguous agricultural belt.

Then, too, direct railways into the northland will lure tourists from the United States into a country which to them, as well as to the majority of Canadians, is a land of mystery and with unexplored attractions for the lover of the great outdoors and the sportsman. They, too, will have to be fed on what the country affords, and this, it can be remembered is a strictly cash business. Moreover, tourists who take excursions into such distant territory will not be the few who, for the first time, they would have to pay, provided they can get the service they demand.

Although its first objective, the construction of a line to Hudson's Bay and of a port and terminal facilities at the northern seaboard has been achieved, the On-to-the-Bay Association does not consider its work completed and it is planning to note that the organization is continuing its efforts to make the venture a success in efforts to secure lower freight and marine insurance rates and to foster tourism via the comparatively new route.

When it is remembered that the Association only came into existence in 1923 its efforts have borne fruit of surprising magnitude in a very short space of time.

Professor Believes Electricity Could Be Produced From Antarctic Gales

Electricity made by Antarctic gales may soon be used to illuminate every home in the world. In the opinion of Prof. Frank Debenham, who was with Captain Scott on his ill-fated expedition and is now director of the Scott Polar Research Institute at Cambridge, England.

Prof. Debenham is confident that the present uninhabited south polar regions, nearly 8,000,000 square miles in extent, will one day house the great power-generating stations of the world.

"All round the continent," he said, "terrible winds blow from the high plateaus and one day these may be harnessed to wind-driven generators. But we should have to wait until we have radio-transmission of power before this inexhaustible source of energy could be connected with the rest of the world."

No human or animal exists in the Antarctic because, even if they could survive the rigors of the climate, there is no plant life.

To construct this, however, the professor said building of subterranean cities far below the ice-bound desolation and deadly blizzards of the Antarctic would not be fantastic.

Scientists now visualize the building of great subterranean caverns where cities can be erected, with complete scientific civilization, artificial sunlight, and air-conditioning which would put the climate under the control of man.

New Source Of Heat

Blanket Of Ozone Above Earth Has Effect On Weather

A new source of hot weather which, strangely enough, seems to lie in the icy cold stratosphere was reported to the American Association for the Advancement of Science at Rochester, N.Y.

The heat source is a "blanket" of ozone which appears to reflect back to the earth the heat which the earth's surface radiates upwards. Ozone is a rare form of oxygen, which it acts as a one-way blanket which lets the sun's heat in but stops the earth's heat from escaping was described by Dr. C. F. Brann of the University of Rochester.

His heat theory, which is new, is one result of the stratosphere flights made by the National Geographic Society and the United States army corps. He proposed it to the American Meteorological Society at the opening session of a three-day meeting of the science association.

The stratosphere flights carried instruments which showed quite definitely that above North America a blanket of ozone lies with its centre 15 to 20 miles above the earth. The extent of the blanket has been recognized by scientists for about 10 years. Evidence it has an effect upon the weather is new.

The ozone blanket, Prof. Brann explained, grows thicker or thinner as the sun's rays increase or diminish. It is a protective blanket which, frequent periods when the sun gives off increased radiation.

Discover New Drug

Announcement Made By U.S. Department Of Agriculture

Outstanding success during the past year in use of a new drug for the treatment of burns, chronic ulcers and other non-healing wounds was announced from the United States department of agriculture. Dr. William Robinson, scientist who brought the chemical known as allantoin into wide use after discovering its curative properties, said remarkable results have been obtained by physicians and surgeons throughout the country.

Speaking cautiously lest the drug might be regarded in the class of alleged cure-alls, Dr. Robinson said results thus far have led the members of the medical profession who have used it to extend the application of allantoin to the treatment of other external wounds which have failed to heal under other treatment. These have included infections of the mouth, diabetic ulcers, and the bone disease known as osteomyelitis.

Inscriptions To Be Engraved On Canadian Memorial At Vimy

Four inscriptions will be engraved on the Canadian war memorial at Vimy. Two will be in both English and French, one in French and one in Latin.

The main inscription on the westerly faces of the pylons will read:

"To the valour of their countrymen in the Great War and in memory of their sixty thousand dead, this monument is raised by the people of Canada."

"A la vaillance des ses fils pendant la Grande Guerre, et en mémoire de ses soixante mille morts, le peuple Canadien a élevé ce monument."

On the inner face of the second front pylon appear:

"The Canadian corps, on April 9, 1917, with four divisions in line on a front of four miles, attacked and captured this ridge."

"L'armée Canadienne attaquait avec quatre divisions sur un front de six kilomètres cette crête et l'emporta le 9 Avril 1917."

As a tribute to French and British troops who suffered so heavily on the ground these words will be engraved on the front face of one pylon near the figure of sacrifice:

"Frères d'armes Français et Britanniques la Canada se Souvient"

On the tomb in front of the memorial a Latin inscription will appear:

"In memoria septingenta milium Canadianensium qui Anno Domini MCMXVII-MCMXVIII in armis ultra mare vitam pro patria ultro dederunt."

Rendered into English this is: "In memory of 60,000 Canadians who in the years 1914-1918 serving in arms overseas of their own free will gave up their lives for their country."

Conducting Forest Survey

Saskatchewan Plans To Protect Timber Against Excessive Cutting

A survey of cut over forests in Saskatchewan will be conducted this summer by the Dominion forest service, in co-operation with the provincial department of natural resources.

The province is anxious to get full information in order to determine the rate of growth of timber as a means of protecting the forests against excessive cutting.

Early in the year, Hon. W. F. Kerr, minister of natural resources, wrote to the federal government, urging that this work be done in the province this year. In pressing for the service, he spoke of the necessity of getting the province's lumbering operation on a sustained yield basis—that is, to limit the cutting operations to the natural growth each year, thus preserving for all time the forest resources of the province.

In reply to this request, the federal government has agreed to conduct the survey, and the work will be undertaken this summer.

FLEMING'S FOLLY

— BY —
LAWRENCE A. KEATINGE

CHAPTER XVIII.

Her face became white and Helen uttered a gasp of dismay. She took a step back as if dumfounded while Link, feeling his discomfort heightened, avoided her accusing eyes. He scarcely noticed Matt Benson, the renter of a small parcel of ranch land from Kilgo, mutter an exclamation behind him. Benson started an instant, then turned and hurried off to reveal the precious morsel of news he had just chanced to overhear. At that moment Ed Port, Fleming's rival, approached from behind and touched his boss's arm. He turned slowly to find the man tense with suppressed excitement.

"Link!" he exclaimed, "I saw that hombre in the checkered skirt. He just went through the back door of the bank!"

"The bank?" A frown slowly rippled his forehead. He saw Port, Waco and the other stopped at that moment, and were quickly apprised of this discovery.

"What yuh goin' to do?" Byrne's uneasy eyes noted Roper at the lead of loungers and cardplayers emerging from the Half Moon.

shoulders, "do you think Port might be wrong?"

"No, sir, he shore saw the guy, Link!"

"But for heaven's sake, gentlemen, we don't entertain holdups in this institution! Why, do you mean—"

Pieper left off, swallowing hard. His eyes fixed on the stargun Fleming drew slowly and held in his hand. His ominous muzzle was pointed at Otto's head. "Reckon you better turn him over," he stated in a flat, determined tone. "That gent is in your bank and we want him."

Silence. Pieper, his mouth wide open, raised trembling hands to ear height. A rap of boot heels made both Star Loop men turn to glance at the front door. Link's eyes clashed with those of Roper Kilgo, clashing on the threshold. Two curious faces peered over his shoulder. Benson and Durr.

"Bank robbery?" Kilgo yelled, pulling back. "Fleming's holdin' up the bank!"

The full significance of this alarm required brief time to reach Link's brain, so utterly ridiculous was the assertion of crime. Growls sprang from other men behind Kilgo. Then, with cries of "Let's get 'em!" and "Bank robbery—help, help!" they surged forward.

Pieper stood as if transfixed. Link for the moment was indecisive—and that hesitation made any bold movement too late. For with Roper Benson, and Howland in the lead, and an increasing crowd of townfolk summoned by the endless chain of startled cries up and down Main Street, the men swarmed about him with guns bristling, faces charged with the threat to kill.

He had no cause to shoot, so merely stood scowling. "Hold on!" Link jerked away angrily as some one clutched his arm. "I'm here after the guy that held me up and stole my steer money! He was seen comin' in this bank!"

"It's a lie! Bosk look out for this man—he's got a gun with him! Grab Durr!" Kilgo yelled. And before Mike could move he was seized.

Roper grunted. "Some more of yuh go outside. Get Halby and Byrne and Laverty. What does a man bring a lot of gun-throbers to town for an' surround the bank? I tell yuh boys," he yelled as he entered the institution became packed with breathless, excited humanity. Link ran out of money. He knows that crazy scheme of his—Fleming's Folly—is gone! batted."

"What does he want to pull this job for?" he cried again. "I'll betcha he was going to leave town. For shore. Ain't Jackpot Mel lookin' for him?"

Just then the tall, angular figure of the gambler made its way to the fore. "Yuh bet I'm after him!" Mell growled nastily, his cold eagle eyes traveling up and down Fleming's frame. "And right now I've got him, too!"

"Hold on, Jackpot—yuh can't pull a shoddy here!"

"Anyhow, we don't want him shot!" bawled someone deep in the crowd. "Let's brinch the dammed bank robber. Done all he could to bust this country an' victimize us ranchers, ain't he?"

Link started to get free. But his gun was gone, and ready hands gripped his arms, holding them behind him. Struggle as he might he was a prisoner, white-faced and tense, facing the crowd of hostile townfolk and ranchers whose vengeance was swiftly being aroused by the cupidity of Kilgo and Mell.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

"Wait!" he yelled. "I tell you I was held up. Ed Port saw the guy come in here—"

"Outside!" cried someone. "Let's have a necktie party!"

The proposal struck a responsive chord. "That's it—let's hang him!" "He can't rob our bank an' get away with it!"

"That holdup's all talk. It's a lie. Link meant to stick up Otto and then make a getaway."

"Yuh—ah—leave the girl first. Why, the Hamilton spread is practically busted right now!"

Amazement flooded over the Star Loop crowd. Face after face dimmed at such viciousness could be touched to life in the hearts and brains of these folk. Always friendly to him, they had suddenly sparked to hate—and why? How was it possible?

He knew, of course; it was plain to the unceasing, crafty work of months by Roper and Mell. The hitherto undisputed leadership of Kilgo was now reaping its harvest.

He did not believe it was a serious enough matter; but actually to have been intended to be driven away from him—that was forever unforgettable.

Jostling, bawling, milling, crying out epithets and insults, the throng crashed and elbowed its way out of the bank. Otto Pieper stood watch as a man struck dumb. Then he followed, automatically, blinking, and feeling his throat, tugging helplessly at his watch chain as he saw the surging mob hurt through his front door and into the street. Otto could not absorb all this. He was dumfounded.

"How about him hang him, boys?" "How about him hang him, boys?"

"Now," snarled a red-bearded rufian, "that's too far. Why not just take the fellow out of the jail?"

This raised the fancy of the mob. Cries of approval greeted the suggestion, and everyone moved down the street. In the crush of sweaty, profane and vulgar humanity Fleming was mauled and shoved, cursed and kicked along with the throng.

He protested, but he was futile and unheard for the threats of rage on all sides. There was no reason here, but only blind frenzy—the ranchers' meeting at the Fall Roper Kilgo had laid this ground work. Now he was reaping his harvest, using Rawhide citizens to wreak vengeance.

The czar of Boone County was to have his unquestioned sway enhanced. Link realized the error of drawing his gun there in the bank. He had done it to spur Otto, to prevent people into so terrific a rage as the yell of "Bank Robbery!" and Roper knew it. It would soon be noon.

Link caught a glimpse of the Hamilton's drawn face at the fringe of the throng. She cried out something to Roper but was ignored. Waco, Byrne and Durr had been rolled by eager hands to the hitch rail before the bank; glancing back he spied them, saw their futile struggle to release themselves.

Other riders, he thought, were prisoners too.

Link's heart sank. The din about his ears rose to a crescendo. He was "tried" to wreck the hull county," bawled someone.

"So yuh finally turned bank robber, eh?" another man thung in his teeth. "Well, I ain't surprised. Fleming tried to answer, but at that instant his captives gave a terrible jerk. He all but fell over his head, dragged to the tall cedar pole that stood before the adobe jail. Someone was climbing it to string a rope through the iron ring at the top. It was meant for a Ragsdale, to be used on holidays. Now it was to be the means of a lynching, the anger of a mob gone mad with insensate hysteria.

Interlude With Death

British Medical Men Are Interested

In Strange Case
British medical circles recently heard the astounding story of Mary Devonport's seven-minute interlude of "death" in a dental chair, how she lost 24 teeth and how she went back to work in a steel factory.

"The case poses a question for those who believe the soul leaves the body on the instant of death," remarked Dr. Alfred A. Maser of Sheffield. He described the case for the British Medical Journal.

Little Helps For This Week

For I am persuaded that neither death nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor heights nor depths, nor any other creature shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord. Romans 8: 38-39.

I know not what the future hath. Of marvel or surprise. Assured alone that life and death His Mercy understands. I know not where His islands lie. Their freented palms in air. I only know we cannot drift Beyond His love and care.

Be of good faith, fear not those things ye may be made to suffer, either outwardly or inwardly, but trust the Lord over all and your life will be long. James 1: 12.

Dear Fellow-readers

Dear fellow-readers of the Press, Let's get together and confess Our foolish faults, our wretched ways.

And plan reforms for future days.

Now, to begin with (item 1), Who hasn't done as I have done—Made manuscripts of many feet. All written on both sides the sheet. And ravel and holly spoke his mind When they were graciously declined?

And (item 2) who hasn't sent A note that was no compliment To the poor Ed., and swore that he Was not reported properly.

On finding that the speech he made Had lost him friends as well as a trade?

And (item 3) who has not wit (Puffed up with pride while doing it)

Poor secrets he felt should prove to men

That HE knew how to wield a pen, And signed them "Constant Reader"—"son!"

Or worse—"Pro Bone Journal?"

Then (item 4), who have not vowed, In tones loudly and loudly, To discontinue!—new!—today!

And take a rival paper—ay! Yet worried when through accident His copy one day wasn't sent?

And, lastly, but not least of all, They listen to our conscience call: Surely it says to not a few

That their subscription's useless: Long overdue and won't they send, And prove themselves their paper's friend?

Dear fellow-readers of the Press, 'Twas time indeed we did confess! "Confession for the soul is good"—So 'praps we'll now do as we should! —Ernest H. A. Howe.

The dry weather of the last few days and the thick growth of the growing crops has been a great drain on the soil, so that a good rain is beginning to be needed to carry the crops along, up to the present they are doing splendidly. At the time of writing the clouds are getting heavier that might gather up enough to bring rain in a day or two, for it is needed.

Staveland were practically whitewashed Wednesday evening in their game with Champion on the local diamond by a score of 20 to 3. A good crowd witnessed the play. Batteries were Robinson, D. Leiff and Hargraves for Champion and O'Connor, Yorko and Rea for Staveland.

Monday, June 29th—Arrowwood at Staveland.
